

A TCM Therapist, an indicted financial innovator and an idealistic community leader walk into a bar...

... where they meet a crypto lawyer who prefers to be a clown and many other overachieving outcasts.

They agree despite their different languages:

The global monetary system is outdated.

It's analog, monocultural and scarcity-based.

A healthy monetary ecosystem

The “solution” of monetary diversity is acknowledged and proven.

- Balanced
- Sovereign
- Relational

After all other ways have been explored, humans can be count on to do the right thing.

The ROSE Complementary Currency Exchange (RCCE)

Serves as heart for a new economic system

Connects two fast growing markets (local/complementary currencies, stable coins)

Is inherently balanced through the coupled coins mechanism

Empowers local communities and new technologies

Sets relational criteria for early adopters

Is informed by successful (Oanda) and failed (Lykke) past exchange ventures

Starts with Intraday Money Market as first step to create global liquidity pool

Common good Structure “Ethics first”

Surplus is allocated to commons (non-profit)

Governed by seasoned stewards and elders

New paradigm organisational structure

Root causes of current monetary system

Analog: The international banking system runs primarily on fragmented legacy system from the past century. Liquidity is distributed across custodians, correspondent banks, clearing houses, central counterparties and regional settlement systems - each governed by its own rules, timeframes and risk assumptions. This fragmentation creates gaps between intention and execution, between a market participant's view of risk and the system's ability to express it. Settlement takes T+2 days and no Intraday Money Market exists, resulting in proxies (e.g. FX swaps) and gentlemen's agreements to fulfil the short term liquidity needs. A fully digital infrastructure would unlock tremendous value.

Monocultural: FIAT system (enshrined by government monopolies) does not allow for complementary currencies to serve their role in a healthy ecosystem. Just as in nature a monoculture might create high yield for a short time but absorbs the fertile ground to produce long-term diverse return. Monocultural systems are also highly vulnerable as has been shown by recurring financial crisis. Further, the values behind the respective FIAT (e.g. USD) are imprinted into the world.

Scarcity-based: The creation of money as interest bearing debt renders it inherently scarce. The resulting pressure leads to negative environmental and social externalities. Ultimately the required "growth" for the system to work comes at the expense of nature and communities.

Slide to show ROSE entirely and its values (Manifesto)

1. Life first
2. Participation over dependency
3. Relationship is value
4. Conscious co-creation
5. Money must serve life
6. Regeneration needs autonomy
7. Inner and outer transformation belong together
8. Balance is sacred
9. Governance protects coherence
10. The new world must be built
